

21 February 1957

Dr. Meredith F. Burrill
Director, Office of Geography
Department of the Interior
Room 2559
Washington 25, D. C.

Dear Dr. Burrill:

Thank you very much for providing copies of the January 1957 issue of "The Professional Geographer." The article on "Geographical Problems relating to the Increasing Importance of Water-based Aircraft" proved of unusual interest to the service members of the NIS Committee as a good example of the impact of new weapons upon the changing requirements of geographic intelligence.

I had not realized until seeing this particular issue that you have been serving as its editor. I congratulate you on the excellence of your fine publication.

Sincerely,

25X1A9a

Assistant Director
Basic Intelligence

Office of Geography